Teacher Wellbeing in Emergencies
INEE Support and Resources

Dr. Oula Abu-Amsha
6 October 2023
Talking Points

● Why does teacher wellbeing matter?

● INEE resources
  ○ TiCC training Pack - Wellbeing Component
  ○ Teacher wellbeing toolkit - recent findings
  ○ A look inside the Guidance Note - strategies to support wellbeing
Just like the children I teach, I have experienced the loss of my home and know what it is like to flee war I did not have any part in. Perhaps, that is the reason why I wanted to come work here and make a difference for these children.”

-Francis Ocaya, a refugee teacher working in Uganda
It is not easy for me to do things with them because they have different behaviors. So we are just managing it. But if we get another training, at least it will help us know how to stay with them. -Grace, an IDP teacher working in Nigeria
Why focus on teacher wellbeing?

Traditionally, “Teacher wellbeing is often conceptualized as a means to achieve student wellbeing, rather than as a valued outcome in and of itself.” (Falk et al 2019)

A shift towards teacher wellbeing as a goal informed by INEE and partners work and formalized in the Transforming Education Summit in 2023: “Educational transformation will only happen if teachers are professionalized, trained, motivated, and supported to drive the process”
How does INEE support Teacher Wellbeing?
Embedding Teacher Wellbeing in Training

The Teachers In Crisis Contexts

Training Pack for Primary School Teachers in Crisis Contexts (2016)

ALSO

Case Studies (2019, 2022)

Teacher stories
Teacher Wellbeing Toolkit Project

- Teacher Wellbeing Guidance Note (2022)
- Teacher Wellbeing Resources Mapping & Gap Analysis (2021)

Available as part of the INEE Collection dedicated to Teacher Wellbeing
Guidance Note: 3 Principles for Teacher Wellbeing

PRINCIPLE 1
Promote teachers’ access to MHPSS

PRINCIPLE 2
Create enabling work environments for teachers

PRINCIPLE 3
Enhance teacher voice, agency and leadership
Teacher wellbeing - context matters

‘Teacher well-being’ is context-specific and encompasses teachers’ affections, attitudes, and evaluations of their work (Schleicher, 2018; Collie et al., 2015).

“To get the meaning of wellbeing, we asked the teachers to write the words they would use in their mother tongue to talk about “being well” and “being capable and confident”. Majority of teachers gave the meaning of being well in their mother tongue as being safe physically, emotionally, socially, and mentally stable.”

INEE Teacher Wellbeing Guidance Note - Contextualization for Kakuma Refugee Camp, Kenya
A Workshop to support contextualization

Teacher Wellbeing in Emergency Settings: Regional contextualization

Published in July 2023
Piloted in Palestine