Strengthening the teaching profession worldwide

Results from the International Task Force on Teachers for Education 2030

2022-2025

Teachers are the most important in-school factor affecting student learning and well-being. The world faces a shortage of 44 million teachers by 2030, threatening progress toward Sustainable Development Goal 4: quality education for all. Addressing this challenge requires stronger teacher policies, coordinated global action and sustained investment in the teaching profession.

Complementing its convening and advocacy work, the Teacher Task Force contributes to global frameworks and shared commitments that guide teacher policy and strengthen coordinated action:

- Contributions to the UN Secretary-General's High-Level Panel on the Teaching Profession, and World Summit on Teachers which adopted the Santiago Consensus calling upon the network to continue convening countries and partners
- Co-creation of global advocacy campaigns through the network
- Support to the development of ISCED-T (International Standard Classification of Education – Teacher Training Programmes) and to the revision of indicators of SDG 4.c.
- Enabling the implementation of the EU-funded Regional Teachers' Initiative in Africa

A growing network working towards policy change for teachers and teaching

Our impact depends on collective action – bringing partners together to sustain teacher policy reform. Between 2022 and 2025, the network expanded significantly, strengthening legitimacy, reach and regional engagement.

The way forward

As teacher shortages intensify, sustained investment in coordinated teacher policy support is more critical than ever. The Teacher Task Force connects global evidence, partnerships and practical tools with country-led reform efforts. Continued engagement helps scale what works – strengthening teacher policy and practice, improving workforce planning and supporting better teaching conditions.

A strong teaching profession is the foundation of peaceful, sustainable societies and a better future for generations to come.
